Baker: Swift investigation following death of toddler

DCF. A child in a foster home in Auburn died on Saturday and another is in intensive care.

Gov. Charlie Baker called for "all hands on deck" in the investigation into a 2-year-old girl who died in a foster home in Auburn last weekend.

The Department of Children and Families said that the foster mother of the girl and of a 22-month-old child who is in intensive care is cooperating with the authorities as they try to determine whether the child's death was accidental, medical or criminal.

"The death of any child is a tragedy," Baker said. "We plan to get to the bottom of these and to make the changes that need to be made so this doesn't happen going forward."

Medical professionals performed CPR and other life-saving methods on the girl who was not breathing on Saturday afternoon. She was declared dead at Worcester Hospital. The other girl is in intensive care. The two are not related by blood, but were both foster children being cared for by the same woman.

A 6-month-old, who also was in DCF care, was also taken from the house as a precautionary move. In total, there were six children in the house.

Secretary of Health and Human Services Marylou Sudder,

Quoted

"The death of any child is a tragedy. We plan to get to the bottom of these and to make the changes that need to be made so this doesn't happen going forward."

Gov. Charlie Baker

who oversees DCF, said there were no issues with the foster mother since she was licensed to oversee foster children. DCF had visited the home four days prior to the child's death and said that nothing seemed out of the ordinary.

There have been no arrests in this instance and no DCF worker has been disciplined.

Baker promised swift results in this investigation and into the death of a 7-year-old boy in Hardwick who was under DCF supervision. The boy was found nearly starved to death and his father was charged as a result.

DCF social workers called upon the Massachusetts Senate for reform after they said caseloads have spiked to an unmanageable level after the disappearance and death of Jeremiah Oliver, a 5-year-old boy in the DCF system who was reported missing in December 2014 and was found stuffed in luggage off of I-90 near Sterling.

As a result, three DCF employees were fired once it was revealed that Oliver went missing and that the social worker assigned to his case hadn't visited his family since April. Former Department of Children and Families Commissioner Olga Roche stepped down in the wake of Oliver's death. A review found that social workers failed to make required family visits and properly report on DCF's contact with Oliver's family.

In 2014, 1-month-old Aliana Lavigne was also found dead in a Grafton apartment in April, two days after social workers found a week-old fax from Grafton police. Another infant, 2-week-old Bailey Irish, also died in April 2014 after her family missed a scheduled DCF visit the day before.

Drugs. State looks to punish fentanyl traffickers with 20 years

Authorities fighting the opiate wars in the Bay State opened another front yesterday, announcing legislation that would increase the penalty for possession of a more than 10 grams of fentanyl to 20 years in prison.

Attorney General Maura Healey said the legislation was necessary to combat drug dealers who often spike heroin with fentanyl — a synthetic opioid 50 times more powerful than heroin — to boost the potency.

The new law would treat possession of more than 10 grams — a little more than a third of an ounce — as evidence of intent to traffic fentanyl.

"Drug cartels have figured out a way to manufacture fentanyl, and they are sending it out on our streets," Healey said. "The reality is that many heroin users do not know the drugs they are using contain fentanyl."

Dr. Dan Carr, professor of public health and community medicine program director of the Pain, Research Education &

Policy program at Tufts Medical said that fentanyl was first developed as a substitute for morphine used in anesthesia, but was far more powerful, and its potency creates risks when used illicitly.

"It augments all of the risks that already exist in an opioid," Carr said. "Unlike morphine, fentanyl can cause muscles to go so rigid, they can't breathe even if they want to. We're trained to be able to handle it in the operating room, but you can't be prepared for that on the streets."

Cathy Fennelly, the mother of a Quincy man who died from an overdose, stood by as Healey outlined her plan Monday. Fennelly knew her son, Paul, had a drug problem — he started smoking pot at age 13, moved onto alcohol and then into pills which led to heroin. But it was a heroin/fentanyl mix that took Paul's life.

"I watched him suffer for eight long years," Fennelly said. "I saw him go through horrific things. It is not something that somebody chooses. They have to the first time, but it turns you into someone you never thought you'd be. It's an instant death and they don't even know. We're going to lose a generation if we don't do something to stop this." NATE HOMAN

FIFA official proposes abolishing executive committee in reform

Governing body.

FIFA's new 15-member reform committee is due to meet in mid-September.

An official overseeing reform efforts at FIFA has produced a radical blueprint for reform of soccer's scandal-hit governing body, including the abolition of its powerful executive committee, according to a person with knowledge of the plan. Domenico Scala, the independent chairman of FIFA's Audit and Compliance Committee, proposes replacing the executive committee with a dual structure. There would be a management committee including independent professionals charged with ensuring

Domenico Scala / GETTY IMAGES

FIFA's day-to-day running and a governing council playing more of an oversight role, the source said.

The governing council, which would have a lot less power than the executive committee, would be elected by FIFA's Congress, which consists of representatives from its 209 member associations around the world. FIFA is facing unprecedented pressure to reform following the May indictment by U.S. authorities of nine current and former soccer officials on bribery-related charges. Many of them had served on the executive committee or in other FIFA positions.

But the proposed reforms are likely to face huge resistance from many within FIFA and from six regional soccer confederations, who currently wield a lot of influence because they nominate members of the executive committee. The move would remove the direct link between the continental confederations and FIFA's power structure. A new Reform Committee, headed by former International Olympic Committee Director General Francois Carrard, could take a different view, and although Scala is to be overseeing its efforts, he isn't in a position to control it.

White House launches plan to counter explosion in heroin use

The White House announced a new strategy on Monday to tackle the explosion in heroin use in a collection of eastern states, focusing on treating addicts rather than punishing them and targeting high-level suppliers for arrest.

The move is a response to a sharp rise in the use of heroin and opiate-based painkillers, which the U.S. Centers for Disease Control has described as an epidemic.

Heroin use has more than doubled among people aged 18-25 in the United States in the past decade, according to CDC figures, while overdose death rates have nearly quadrupled. An estimated 45 percent of U.S. heroin users are also addicted to prescription painkillers.

Announcing the Heroin Response Strategy on Monday, Michael Botticelli, director of National Drug Control Policy, said the new plan will address the heroin and painkiller epidemics as both "a public health and a public safety issue."

Under the plan, $2.5 million of $13.4 million in new funding to combat drug trafficking will target regions the White House said are facing a severe heroin threat: Appalachia, New England, New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and Baltimore.

Death toll from California mid-air crash rises to five

The death toll from a mid-air collision between an executive jet used by military contractor BAE Systems and a small plane over Southern California has risen to five.

The fiery crash left debris and bodies scattered over more than a mile and sparked brush fires in the area where the wreckage landed near the U.S. border with Mexico, San Diego-based Cal Fire Division Chief Nick Schuler said on Monday.

A twin-engine Sabreliner crashed with a single-engine Cessna some two miles from Brown Field Municipal Airport in San Diego County, Schuler said.

Maryland 'Batman' dies, struck by car

A Maryland man famous for an online video where he was stopped by police while wearing a Batman costume died after his customized "Batmobile" broke down along a state highway.

The man, 51-year-old Leonard Robinson, began wearing the suit for visits to children's hospitals, where he handed out knickknacks bearing the logo of Batman.

He was killed late Sunday night after his car broke down on an interstate highway and stopped, partially in the fast lane. He had gotten out of the car and was checking the engine when another vehicle collided with his.

Planned Parenthood seeks injunction against Florida health agency

Planned Parenthood sought an emergency legal injunction on Monday against Florida health officials to block the use of what it says are "new and unpublished" standards to define pregnancy gestation periods.

The legal move filed in circuit court in Tallahassee comes after Florida's Republican Gov. Rick Scott ordered a probe last month of the state's 16 Planned Parenthood locations which resulted in three clinics being cited Aug. 5 for illegally performing abortions in the second trimester.

Clashes

Civilians, soldiers die in east Ukraine fighting

Fighting flared between Ukrainian forces and Russian-backed rebels in separate parts of eastern Ukraine overnight, killing at least two Ukrainian soldiers and several civilians, Kiev's military and separatist sources said on Monday.

The clashes, near the port of Mariupol in the southeast and at rebel-held Horlivka, further frayed an increasingly tenuous cease-fire as Ukraine prepared to mark its Independence Day next week.

Kiev accused the separatists of shelling civilians on the outskirts of Mariupol. In Moscow, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov blamed Kiev for the violence, giving no detail but saying he suspected Ukraine was preparing a new offensive.

Bangkok bomb kills 19, dozens hurt in bid 'to destroy economy'

Blast. At the scene lay burned motorcycles, rubble from the shrine's wall and pools of blood.

A bomb planted at one of the Thai capital's most renowned shrines on Monday killed 19 people, including three foreign tourists, and wounded scores in an attack the government called a bid to destroy the economy.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast at the Erawan Shrine at a major city-center intersection. Thai forces are fighting a low-level Muslim insurgency in the predominantly Buddhist country's south, but those rebels have rarely launched attacks outside their heartland.

"The perpetrators intended to destroy the economy and tourism, because the incident occurred in the heart of the tourism district," Defense Minister Prawit Wongsuwan told Reuters.

Several media outlets had earlier reported that 27 people were killed, but Somyot Poompanmoung, the national police chief, told reporters the death toll was 16 in an attack he said was unprecedented in Thailand.

"It was a pipe bomb," Poompanmoung said. "It was placed inside the Erawan Shrine."

Quoted

"There were bodies everywhere. Some were shredded. There were legs where heads were supposed to be. It was horrific."

Marko Cunningham, a New Zealand paramedic working with a Bangkok ambulance service

The shrine, on a busy corner near top hotels, shopping centers, offices and a hospital, is a major attraction, especially for visitors from East Asia, including China. Many ordinary Thais also worship there.

The government would set up a "war room" to coordinate the response to the blast, the Nation television channel quoted Prime Minister Prayuth Chan-ocha as saying. REUTERS

Harry Styles calls up Zayn Malik's ex

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Ever since ex-One Directioner Zayn Malik ended his engagement with Little Mix's Perrie Edwards via text message three weeks ago, she's been getting a lot of support from her friends and fans. But recently, she received a phone call from someone she didn't expect: Harry Styles. Styles wasn't moving in on Malik's girl — come on, now — he was checking in on Edwards and making sure she was doing OK. A source tells the Daily Star that Styles really understands what it's like to have a broken heart because his girlfriend dumped him when he was 14. While an eighth-grade breakup isn't quite the same as ending an engagement, we're loving that Styles put the bros before hos rule aside to check up on Edwards. What a guy!

Kylie Jenner offered $10 million to do porn

Kylie Jenner certainly doesn't shy away from flaunting her bod on Instagram, but would she ever consider doing porn? Vivid Entertainment seems to think so. TMZ reports that the porn film company sent Jenner a letter promising her $10 million in exchange for a sex tape of her and boyfriend Tyga.

"Kim's sex tape helped launch her career, and [this] would be nothing but positive for you," the offer letter reportedly says. Apparently, the porn industry has been counting down the days for Jenner to turn 18 and she's gotten multiple million-dollar-plus deals. This is the world we live in, people.

Jemaine Clement is a normal dude

Interview. The Flight of the Conchords member and "People Places Things" star is not a deadpan machine in real life.

Jemaine Clement goes serious, for the most part, in "People Places Things," an indie in which he plays a father of two whose wife leaves him for another man. But it's still funny, and it still makes use of the Flight of the Conchords member's gifts for deadpan comedy, requiring he deliver most of his lines in a manner that's still restrained. In person, Clement is open, friendly and very prone to laughter. In fact, he laughs so much it can be, for those who've been watching his work for years, a touch disarming.

You've done a lot of work in New York City. Did you learn

Jemaine Clement (with Aundrea and Gia Gadsby) plays a graphic novelist just out of a marriage in "People Places Things," now on VOD. / THE FILM ARCADE some new things by making a film about the parenting part of it, which is especially huge in Brooklyn?

There are parenting parts of the city. In one neighborhood, everyone's into wearing a Baby Bjorn. Schooling here is the big issue for some people. I live in New Zealand, where it's pretty much free. To send kids to school costs about $70 a year.

Were you nervous to try something like this, which is a little more serious?

I think that it [being] more serious made me more interested and more cautious. I wasn't worried about the drama or emotional moments, because I have emotions. I know [laughs] that I have emotions, and I project them in the normal human way. But would that be interesting to watch? Because when you do comedy, especially on the stage, you just want laughs all the time. You want a reaction all the time. Whenever the audience is silent, you're failing.

Do you feel that same pressure to constantly entertain with more dramatic work?

I've known friends who've done dramas, and they don't know how it has gone till the very end. They may think it's dying, and at the end, the audience applauds. They go, "Phew, that was a long time to wait." I did a film with Steven Spielberg, and he said during "Jaws" he had nightmares for months. He didn't know it was a success till the day it came out. For months, he had no idea it would work.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

One more thing

Back home

How are the comedy opportunities back home in New Zealand?

It's hard to do comedy in New Zealand, especially in television. Film's a bit more open in New Zealand, but TV, they're just imitating American TV. We would have to go to America, make a show, then go back to New Zealand and say, "We'll make a show like that American show." [Laughs] New Zealand invented those terrible "Pop Idol" shows, like "American Idol." They had a show about this band. The idea got copied and copied then changed, and then it became "Pop Idol" and "American Idol." Then New Zealand copied that idea that we had in the first place. So we didn't have a chance there.

Felicia Day is the Internet personified. Just like searching online for any oddball obsession that might be looked down upon in real life, Day is open to trying pretty much anything, which she proves time and time again on her YouTube series "The Flog." Just this season, the 36-year-old attempted pole dancing, fencing and neon sign making.

With 1.4 million YouTube subscribers, the gamer, writer, producer and actress ("Buffy the Vampire Slayer," "Supernatural") has a fan base that expands across multiple mediums. But her new memoir, "You're Never Weird on the Internet (Almost)" is the first time she's shared her story in its entirety.

Internet connection

"I think it's a normal human impulse to want to connect with people. Growing up, I was homeschooled, which didn't allow me to connect with a lot of people in the real world," says Day about why she looked online to make friends. "As far as I remember, technology was a vehicle for meeting people and sharing my enthusiasm about something."

Felicia Day has conquered TV, YouTube and now books. / PROVIDED

A lot of Day's personal interests, like gaming, comics and math, aren't typically associated with women, and she says she faced a lot of sexism as a result. But her online support team has her back. "There's a lot of pressure to conform to the cliché of what we look like, and that's why the Internet is an amazing place because it's really about your personality," she says. "It's a beautiful thing to counter the expectations of people either based on your gender or race, standing up and saying, 'You're ill-informed.'"

#GamerGate

Of course, the Internet hasn't always been warm and fuzzy for her. Last year, Day's personal information, including her address, was released online, subjecting her to being the target of stalkers.

"It was a very hurtful incident in my life and not just personally, but because I love gaming, and I love spreading the love of gaming," she says. "That's not my world of gaming. I know wonderful people through it, and I would hate for someone to be dissuaded from being a part of the gaming world because of that incident. It's very sad."

Finding your superpower

There is a whole chapter in the book devoted to #GamerGate, something Day hopes others will learn from. In fact, she hopes her memoir as a whole will spread positivity and inspire readers to be their own authentic weird selves.

"Our uniqueness is what we have to offer to the world," she says. "Your weirdness is your superpower, and you shouldn't give up your superpower just because other people tell you to. That's the worst plot for a superhero movie."

Can trans women expect the Caitlyn Jenner Effect?

The Caitlyn Jenner Effect?

Though celebrities have been known to drive trends in surgery, both cosmetic and medical, Spiegel doesn't see Caitlyn Jenner's story changing the field of facial feminization — because her story is only news to those of us who aren't transgender.

"The change is that now when Bill comes to his office and says, 'I'm Susan, I'm a transgender woman,' people are not going to be surprised by her. 'Oh, like Caitlyn Jenner! Yeah, I know about that,'" he explains. "And all of a sudden, this is no longer a surprising, first-time-I've-ever-heard-about-this thing."

As for driving a new standard of femininity, Spiegel says that's out of the hands of everyone in the Kardashian clan. "We don't as a society define what are feminine facial characteristics or not," he says. "This is thousands and thousands of years of evolution that have told us what feminine facial features are." Even cosmetic surgeons don't have a template: The search for the platonic ideal of femininity is ongoing.

Facial feminization specialist Dr. Jeffrey Spiegel tells us what's changed — and what hasn't.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Trans women undergo incredible changes, major and minor, to feel like their appearance can finally match how they feel inside. For some, the process isn't complete without cosmetic surgery to appear as feminine as possible. But who is facial feminization surgery for?

Dr. Jeffrey Spiegel, now a renowned surgeon in the field of facial feminization, began developing his technique 16 years ago when a trans woman first came to his office. Spiegel wasn't sure what to do — and there was no medical literature to guide him.

The eventual procedure was a success, which led to a continuing stream of referrals that changed his career. "I started thinking a lot about this interesting, unanswered question as to what makes a face feminine, and it became something I focused on," he says.

We asked the Boston-based surgeon about why some women opt for FFS and what the post-Caitlyn Jenner era holds.

What do trans women want?

Though Spiegel says many of his transgender clients do request "a stunningly gorgeous look," most of them come in with one main concern — and it's not about how they see themselves: "I want to be able to answer the door without makeup and have someone not say, 'Good morning, sir.' I want my facial gender cues to send the right message without having to put so much effort into it."

Internal vs. external

The cluster of procedures that make up FFS are not all necessary for everyone. And there's also the consideration that some people want to maintain a shifting identity.

"Some people say, 'I'm a trans woman. It's time for me to live that life 100 percent of the time — do everything, and I'll start as soon as I'm healed,'" Spiegel explains. "And others say, 'I know who I am, but I have my job, my family, my relationships; I'm not ready to fully switch my life just yet, so let's do a few things where I can still shift back and forth and do more later.'"

The woman in the mirror

Spiegel's patients often worry whether they will recognize themselves — and just as importantly, will the people in their lives recognize them. "The answer is that you recognize yourself more, and people recognize you more," he says.

Consider this hypothetical: Bill tells his colleagues that he is transitioning to becoming Susan. Though there may be a conscious understanding, it clashes with the masculine signals of his face being perceived by our subconscious. "After surgery, she walks into the room, and the facial cues that are sent are 'Susan.' And they recognize you more: They see you not as a different person, but now they see you as yourself, and it's obviously you on a subconscious level."

Everything you need to know about getting an online degree

Don't enroll before consulting this list.

RAQUEL LANERI
@RaquellLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Still haven't decided where to go to college, or even if you can afford to go to a university — or grad school — at all? Why not consider getting your diploma online?

"The great thing about online degrees is that there's flexibility," says Emily Bartz, content manager at the consumer research group NextAdvisor.com. "Everyone has a lot of different things going on. Online education is a great avenue for someone who is committed to getting a degree but can't go to school [from] 9 a.m. to 5 p.m."

Yet choosing an online college can be just as daunting as settling on a more traditional school. We asked Bartz about finding the best one for you.

Find a program that fits your needs

Every online program is unique — which is why knowing what you want to major in or what kind of job you want to find after graduating is key. "So many online colleges cater to specific needs and interests," says Bartz.

That doesn't just apply to specific areas of study but to lifestyle demands as well. For example, Bartz cites American Intercontinental University as a great option for those in the military. Not only are one in three AIU students military-affiliated, the school offers scholarships, flexible schedules and transferable credits to make the process as seamless as possible.

Talk to professors beforehand

If you're worried about balancing your familial or economic responsibilities with a college education, you can always ask for advice.

"The great thing about online colleges is that even if you aren't meeting your professor in person, you can get in contact with them before

Work hard

While online education may be more flexible, accommodating and affordable, it's hardly a walk in the park. "There's this misconception that online college is easier, but that is not true," says Bartz. "It can be more convenient, but it still requires focus and attention."

You may be able to get your college diploma on your own time online, but that doesn't mean you can slack off. ISTOCK classes start and address some of your concerns," says Bartz. "You can also contact the administration office and talk with them to help determine if the school is a good fit."

Apply for scholarships

Just like your traditional brick-and-mortar institutions, online colleges can vary greatly in price. "Sure, you're going to save online, but it is a college education, which means you will have to spend money," says Bartz.

But even if your dream program falls outside of your price point, you can still make it work.

"There are tons of scholarships, even for online colleges, so if you find a good school that you think fits your needs, you should reach out to them and see what kinds of scholarship opportunities they offer," Bartz says.

Make sure the school is accredited

It can be tempting if you don't have a big budget to go for the cheapest option. But as online education has gotten more popular, programs offering fake, nonaccredited diplomas have popped up with alarming frequency.

Fortunately, it's easy to tell if a school is legit: The U.S. Department of Education has a database of accredited universities. "Just type in any name, and it will tell you right away," says Bartz. "It could be a smaller school that's still great but not that well known, but you should double check just to be safe."

Metro Boston Advertorial - Simulation

A Master's Degree Gets Real with Simulations

If you're someone who doesn't want to be cooped up in a classroom, who knows that jumping into any subject head-on is the best way to learn, then the Master of Science in Management (MSM) at Mount Ida College in Newton, MA, could be just the educational experience you've been looking for.

One of the highlights of the program is the use of simulations. "The MSM program provides the balance of classroom experience with industry professionals, combined with experiential learning. And at the apex of the experience is the business simulation offered in the capstone course," says Dr. Scott Burke, Assistant Dean of Graduate Studies.

"Students work in teams which are competing in a global market arena, including Europe-Africa, North America, Asia-Pacific, and Latin America. The simulation experience not only ranks performance against your classmates, but also benchmarks against, on average, 2,500 teams from 200 colleges worldwide."

The key benefit of the simulation according to Burke: "It works! Mount Ida's winning team in 2015 earned a Global Top 100 ranking in five of the 10 weeks that they competed. In fact, the team tied for #1 worldwide in four of those weeks—a terrific team effort and performance." A recent statement from a student summed up her experience:

"They say you really can't put a price on an education and that's exactly how I feel about this simulation and the course overall. I have learned so many things about myself and business that I feel like a completely different person than the one that first entered the classroom."

Isenberg Online MBA Adds Value to Physician's Career

Mark Fuller, Dean of the Isenberg School of Management with Dr. Bernard Lee.

Like many physicians and medical administrators, Dr. Bernard Lee understands that health care is both a healing profession and a business. In 2011, Dr. Lee, who is Chief of the Division of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, earned his Online MBA from the Isenberg School of Management at UMass Amherst. During his MBA studies, Dr. Lee was in good company. The online program ranked 11th in the world by the Financial Times—currently empowers 1300 upwardly mobile professionals, including 230 physicians.

When Dr. Lee joined Beth Israel Deaconess, he was charged with building the hospital's breast reconstruction program. That, he discovered, entailed organization and business proficiencies that went beyond his med school curriculum. That's where Isenberg added tremendous value. "The program was so well designed; it was virtually seamless," he recalls.

Dr. Lee promptly applied his coursework to his professional challenges. He gained an immediate edge in increasing productivity, reducing waste, and building more effective teams. The curriculum also helped him to better understand the role of physicians and patients in the changing landscape of medicine. The Isenberg Online MBA, he emphasizes, was "phenomenal." "I am proud to be an Isenberg alumnus."

At Isenberg, Dr. Lee joined a vibrant network of online MBA students from diverse professional backgrounds. They learn best business practices from one another and from our nationally celebrated faculty. Just like our students, Isenberg Online MBA dedicates itself to a singular mission of continuous adaptability and continuous improvement.

Cambridge College launches new, cutting-edge MBA in Health Care Program

Cambridge College launches new, cutting-edge MBA in Health Care Program According to a Graduate Management Admission Council (GMAC) study, the proportion of employers seeking new business school graduates continues to show a strong upward trend in 2015, with 84% of companies surveyed planning to add recent MBAs to their workforce. This trend is evident in the health care sector, the second largest employer in the country. Cambridge College's School of Management is excited to announce the launch of its new and unique Master of Business Administration in Health Care (MBA-HC) program. This program is tailored to fit the needs of professionals working in healthcare, with flexible schedules that offer classes on evenings and weekends at all of its locations in Cambridge, Lawrence and Springfield. The new MBA-HC program has been designed to meet the demands of healthcare employers with today's most in-demand management degree. MBA-HC candidates will learn how to get more out of their team, out of themselves, and out of each day, increasing their impact on their organization and the people they serve.

In keeping with its mission of providing access to academically excellent, time-efficient and cost-effective higher education, the cost of the new Cambridge College MBA program makes it one of the most affordable in the area. The admissions process emphasizes a candidate's background and experience rather than test-taking ability. As such, no GMAT testing is required for this program.

The MBA Healthcare curriculum has been carefully designed and delivered by faculty who are practicing managers and experts in the fields, in consultation with advisors who are industry leaders. MBA Healthcare students attend classes with other healthcare professionals allowing them to exchange insights with colleagues in the field. The core curriculum includes courses with a healthcare focus and incorporates a powerful combination of critical thinking, data analysis, project management, financial and technological skills with communication, self-management, teamwork and leadership skills. Students may specialize in health care management or healthcare informatics.

The flexibility and affordability of the Cambridge College program provides healthcare professionals with the MBA credentials that are increasingly in demand as employers look for candidates who can effectively manage and lead their organizations.

For more information, attend their upcoming Information Session on August 27th, at 6:00 pm in Cambridge or inquire about events at their Lawrence and Springfield campuses. Meet with faculty, financial aid and admissions personnel, and learn more about the new Cambridge College MBA program. Contact them today at 1-800-829-GRAD or at www.cambridgecollege.edu.

WHEN SCHOOLS SAY THEY OFFER STUDENT SUPPORT, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

It could mean a lot of different things. At Bay State College it means we understand that going back to school is a big decision. And, it means we understand your concerns about succeeding at the college level. That's why, regardless of how you see yourself doing in college, we see an opportunity to help you realize your potential with a community of support.

What else does it mean? It means that admissions counselors can show off our campus, answer your questions and guide you through our selection process—even before you apply. It means helping 95 percent of this year's freshman class receive grants or scholarships that don't have to be repaid. It means personal success coordinators and a closely-knit student body that can help make America's biggest college town feel a little more like home.

In the classroom, it means a wide variety of Associates and Bachelor's degree programs in such in-demand fields as healthcare, business, fashion, criminal justice and more. No matter which program you choose, it means learning in small classes from accessible professors with real-world experience in their field. To fit your schedule, it means making classes available at night or online.

As you advance toward your degree, it means having a personal career advancement team. It means helping you write cover letters and resumes, creating mock job interviews and using social media to help you get noticed. It means internships at some of Boston's best companies and organizations to build working relationships with people that can help you find a full-time position doing what you love.

In the end, what does it all mean? It means that at Bay State College, we care as much about your comfort as we do your success. It means we're committed to providing you unmatched student support throughout your college journey. It means that going back to school doesn't mean going it alone.

Worth a shot

Take a flier on these receivers:

- Stevie Johnson, Chargers — Better than former slot man Eddie Royal. Plus, Antonio Gates is suspended and Malcolm Floyd is about to retire.
- Leonard Hankerson, Falcons — A Kyle Shanahan special, Hankerson is set to pounce if rapidly declining Roddy White can't get it done.
- Terrance Williams, Cowboys — Tony Romo will have to throw more this year with no DeMarco Murray.

GO THE SAFE ROUTE EARLY, THEN GET WILD

Fantasy football. Attempting to find value in the later rounds of drafts.

I would not have gone sky-diving when I was 8 years old. My remaining life expectancy was far too great to take a risk like that so early. Now that I'm 32, relying on a parachute packed by some stoners at the foot of a mountain makes more mathematical sense. If the chute doesn't open, I've experienced a lot on this planet and it's been a good run.

We should think about fantasy drafts the same way. Target safe high-floor players in the early rounds, accept more risk in the middle rounds and take wild upside shots in the late rounds. If these late-round fliers (Rounds 11-14) don't work out, we can simply move along for a waiver-wire gem early in the season.

Jameis Winston has great upside and could be a steal late in your draft. / GETTY IMAGES

Dual threat QB

Some think waiting for the Cam Newton, Tony Romo, Eli Manning tier is practicing a late-round quarterback strategy. It's not. Letting those guys pass us by and then going with two high-upside cheapies like Sam Bradford and Jameis Winston creates more value shots in Rounds 7-10 at tougher positions. Bradford is fully healthy and at the controls of a Chip Kelly offense that has produced 65 total touchdowns out of quarterbacks over the last two years. Winston has a fantasy-friendly aggressive style, three big/strong weapons, a poor running game and an awful defense that will set up shootouts.

Second to one

Taking shots on secondary options in high-powered offenses is a smart move. Davante Adams has the trust of Aaron Rodgers, as evidenced by the 11 targets in last year's playoff win against Dallas. The Colts didn't use the No. 29 overall pick on Phillip Dorsett to have him sit on the bench. And whoever wins the No. 3 battle in New Orleans between Nick Toon and Brandon Coleman will be worth a shot — Marques Colston is on his last legs.

Bet on talent

Another approach to mining for late-round fliers is selecting talent in spite of seemingly poor situations. A good example is Brian Quick, a 6-foot-3 specimen who is coming off a severe shoulder injury and plays for the low-powered Rams. Marvin Jones is having a shaky training camp and the Bengals have a ton of mouths to feed, but he scored 10 touchdowns while playing 48 percent of the snaps in 2013. If Victor Cruz (knee) can't get right and Rueben Randle can get his head on straight, he's a post-hype sleeper. And David Cobb certainly has the ability to beat out Bishop Sankey in Tennessee.

MLB

E-Rod back on mound, Francona supporting Farrell

Eduardo Rodriguez will get the ball for the Red Sox Tuesday (7 p.m., NESN) at Fenway Park against Cleveland and he'll be looking to rebound from arguably the worst start of his young MLB career.

Rodriguez allowed eight earned runs on nine hits in just five innings of work at Miami last week in a 5-0 Red Sox loss. The lefty, who was absolutely brilliant in the first three starts of his Boston career, has been hit or miss of late. Overall, Rodriguez now owns a 4.83 ERA, 1.29 WHIP and 6-5 record.

The Indians are scheduled to counter with Trevor Bauer (9-9, 4.35 ERA) on the mound on Tuesday.

Get well soon

Red Sox manager John Farrell, who announced

Terry Francona / GETTY IMAGES

last week that he will miss the remainder of the 2015 season as he battles Stage 1 lymphoma, will have his first chemotherapy session on Tuesday. According to NESN's Tom Caron, Cleveland manager and former Sox skipper Terry Francona will accompany Farrell to the first session.

Farrell and Francona remain close friends as Farrell served as the pitching coach on Francona's Red Sox staff from 2007-10. MATT BURKE
